We Also Offer Full Stack Support To Set Up Neurofeedback In Your Practice

Neurofeedback is a training approach that utilizes equipment to monitor and regulate brain activity. The process involves measuring the electrical activity of the brain, known as EEG, to determine the brain's state of calmness, alertness, or tension. The information obtained from the EEG is then used to provide feedback to the brain in real-time, rewarding desired brain activity. To ensure the most effective training, a comprehensive measurement of the brain known as a Quantitative Electroencephalogram (QEEG) is conducted before the therapy begins.
